BP, Clipper Windpower to Develop U.S. Wind Projects

July 14 (Bloomberg) -- BP Plc, Europe's largest oil company, and Clipper Windpower Plc of London agreed to co-develop five wind farms in the U.S. as surging prices for fossil fuels boost demand for renewable energy sources.

``Clipper is one of the few pure-play wind companies," said Robert Wilder, founder of Encinitas, California-based WilderShares LLC, which tracks the 40 stock WilderHill Clean Energy Index. ``It takes their wells-to-wheels oil strategy into clean energy."

``BP wants to be more than an oil company and this shows their commitment," Wilder said in an interview.
